Re: Emotional Stigmata: Living

as the victim of clergy abuse

God bless you guys for exposing the evils of pedophilia and the clergy.

Our most trusted clergy have traumatized everyone, especially when one is a religious person. It is hard to believe.

Who would ever think that our clergy were some of the worst child abusers, rapists, molesters?

Please keep up the good work, for the more it is exposed, the less it will happen, for they know that now we are aware of this horrific crime against our children and young people.

We must also let our representatives know that we Americans do not want our young children arrested for doing illegal drugs since they are only searching for a way to feel better. They are self-medicating themselves, and you and I cannot blame them.

We punish the people who are suffering while allowing the criminals to get away with the abuse and rape.

I just read a newspaper article telling how there was an unwritten law to "not arrest priests or religious figures in the Catholic Church since a lot of the law enforcement agents were Catholic."

This is very sick. We have sacrificed our children for the clergy who do not follow God, but their own sickness. God is not for child abuse in any fashion or form, and those who think a clergyman is more important than a child is a very sick human being and does not know our GOD!
